

Some people work in planning large business events. In addition to the previous functions, the organizers have to plan other activities for the event. For example, they have to conserve speakers' time at conferences. Planning includes providing food for guests.