Let's explore the evolution of automatic night light control systems.The shift to sensor-driven technology marked a significant improvement, with modern devices using photodiodes and phototransistors to adjust lighting dynamically based on ambient light changes.Originally, these systems relied on basic timers to schedule lighting, lacking adaptability to actual lighting conditions.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com