

Henna is an ancient custom and popular tradition in many cultures, and its use dates back thousands of years. It is believed that the use of henna began in India and the Middle East, and later spread to North Africa and the rest of the world. Henna is used in celebrations and special occasions such as weddings and holidays, as well as for medical and cosmetic purposes.