

The successful entrepreneur does not only represent himself, but rather represents his country and its people, and that with his success, the country succeeds and builds good relations with the general public of different nationalities and social classes. Among the challenges he faced at the beginning were primitive working methods and the high cost of imported equipment 5 – The financial aspect and the lack of resources and capabilities available at the present time may be a great challenge that only a person with determination and persistence can overcome, and that being patient and starting to climb the ladder of success begins with a bold step. 2 – He founded the Ahmed Mansour Al-Aali Group in 1949. He currently owns several branches outside Bahrain.