

This retrospective study, hampered by a small number of participants and limited laboratory testing, suffered from insufficient data due to poor hospital–patient and inter–institutional cooperation in Sirte. These limitations, highlighting a service–education gap, necessitate improved collaboration for future research to achieve more comprehensive data and better patient outcomes.