

Volkswagen's main problem, in this case, is that it has installed a hidden system inside the cars that makes it know when to conduct diesel emissions checks, and during it, the car reduces the power of the engine, which will lead to the illusion of the technical factor that this car is low emissions and conforms to the required international conditions. It also contributes to the development of cars manufactured and increases their quality by Volkswagen.