

The environment The environment (English: the environment) is a set of biological, chemical, and physical factors that work on the organism, and the environmental systems that determine its shape and its survival, [1] as the environment is concerned with several sciences, including biology and earth sciences, through scientific analysis , And study interactions between organisms.[4]