

Since water forms a core of the existence of human and other living things, its preservation and sustainable availability cannot be overemphasized. Factoring these environmental protection policies into the goals and objectives of various actors involved in environmental deterioration will help policies performance.