

Stone is used in aesthetic clinic design as a material that symbolizes a connection to nature, contributing to stress reduction and promoting a sense of healing among patients. The natural texture of stone, when combined with indirect lighting, creates a calm sensory experience that extends beyond purely medical functions.