Effective communication is all about conveying (send) your messages to other people clearly and unambiguously.Doing this involves effort from both the sender of the message and the receiver.