

The hospital breached this duty by failing to properly examine Aiman, misdiagnosing his condition, and not ordering an MRI. Instead, Dr. Yaqoob relied solely on an Xray, which cannot detect soft tissue or nerve related problems, and dismissed the elevated white blood cell count as a typical viral response. It was clear from the scenario that the failure to order an MR despite clear signs of infection and ignoring a neurological risk demonstrates a serious breach of duty.