

Products are all the same: The goods made under a system of division of labor are regularly turned out in huge numbers and share the same design. They are standardized. Whether this is a disadvantage is a matter of people's opinion.