

Validated learning emphasizes testing and validating assumptions through experimentation. This approach allows startups to discover what customers truly desire, leading to more effective product development.