

Food is the sustainer of life regardless of whether they belong to animal kingdom or plant kingdom. Subsequently they may convert the raw natural food into usable form on their own. All living beings consume food as they come in nature.