

Employment law governs the relationship between employers and employees, ensuring fair treatment, safety, and legal compliance in the workplace. Additionally, employment law protects employees' rights to form unions and engage in collective bargaining