

The Vision Loss Expert Group data showed that in 2020, an estimated 43 million people were blind, 295 million had MSVI, 257 million had mild VI, and 507 were VI from uncorrected presbyopia. We face enormous challenges in avoiding vision impairment as the global population grows and ages, as services are often not available, accessible, acceptable, or affordable.