

The population growth in the Arab world has been very rapid during the last 40 years, reaching up to 2% every year. As a result, the population has doubled within the last 30 years and is expected to double yet again by 2050. This high average birth rate creates many problems since the higher the number of people the more resources are needed to fulfill their basic needs.