

Renewable energy sources are becoming increasingly important as the world seeks to reduce its reliance on fossil fuels. These forms of renewable energy are all sustainable and produce little to no greenhouse gas emissions, making them attractive alternatives to traditional fossil fuels. Solar energy is harnessed through the use of photovoltaic cells, which convert sunlight into electricity. Hydroelectric power is produced by harnessing the energy of moving water, typically through the use of dams.