

The relationship between self-esteem and academic achievement is complex, with conflicting findings. Research on parental education's Impact on self-esteem is contradictory, with some studies indicating a positive correlation and others suggesting a negative relationship due to higher parental expectations. Similarly, studies on the influence of place of residence on self-esteem provide mixed results.