International treaties are regarded as the primary source of international law and reflect an instrument of regulation between international relations from an old time when international treaties have served as a peace and an alliance between States. They are the first reference to international treaties where the parties to treaties have dealt with their topics and procedures tired in acceding to them.