

Sure! Here's an explanation of two phases in the Software Evolution process: 1. Properly managing change requests is crucial to ensure that the software evolves in a way that aligns with user requirements and overall project goals. Change Request This phase involves identifying and documenting changes that users or stakeholders want to implement in the software. It can arise from various needs, such as fixing bugs, adding new features, or adapting to changes in the business environment. 2.