

Literature is a collection of written works, especially those considered of superior or lasting artistic merit. Literature also functions on a broader level as it exposes us to the world of emotions, expressions, and dynamic phenomena that have been taking place in the world at various levels, be it political, personal, social, historical, psychological, or even environmental. However, in reality, it functions more broadly in society as a means of both criticizing and affirming cultural values.