

The training period aims to prepare trainees to be qualified to work for employers. It enhances abilities and efficiency and requires a contract to regulate the relationship between the trainee and the employer or training center.