

Education in Oman has evolved significantly over the centuries. As part of Oman Vision 2040, the focus is on creating an integrated educational system that promotes sustainable development and equips young Omanis with the skills necessary for the future. In higher education, numerous universities and specialized colleges have been established, offering diverse programs that prepare students for various fields. With the onset of the modern renaissance in 1970, under Sultan Qaboos bin Said, the educational landscape began to change dramatically. Despite these achievements, challenges remain, such as ensuring educational quality in remote areas and aligning curricula with job market demands.