

Obtaining a sample for bacterial capsule observation requires strict sterile technique. This ensures a clean sample and prevents contamination, making it possible to accurately determine the presence of bacterial capsules.