

Type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2DM) is a complex metabolic disorder characterized by insulin-secreting β -cells. Further, type 2 diabetes is now affecting children and adolescents under 30 due to increased obesity, with cases reported in countries like the UK, USA, India, Japan, and Australia. This leads to increased insulin secretion to counteract insulin resistance in peripheral tissues (1).