

Diana Taurasi Takes a Jab at Caitlin Clark and the Rookies Even After Pleading the Fifth. The feud between Diana Taurasi and Caitlin Clark does not seem to have an end. After undermining the Fever's rookie twice already, the WNBA's leading scorer finds yet another way to call out the sensational hooper. She said, "Our League's now almost 30 years old. So it's nothing new under the sun. There is a lot of talk about the rookies coming in which has been amazing. I've been able to see them play now for 4 years. What they were able to do in college was truly amazing. Anyone that loves the WNBA, we want that momentum to carry on. " Taurasi's response was to a question posed by Bloom regarding her thoughts on the integration of rookies, especially Caitlin Clark with the league this year. While she did plead a fifth on the question, where did Taurasi find a loophole? Talking to Barry Bloom of Sportico in her post-game press conference, Diana Taurasi commented on Caitlin Clark. While the NCAA's all-time scoring leader is not responding to any of it, Phoenix's GOAT is not going out of fuel either. She further added, "This new generation really does carry a lot of weight when it comes to, I think they call it the social platforms. So, it's incredible to see that momentum. I'm with the OG's not the IG." When he nodded to the question, she simply took back her words.
