

The purpose of operating systems is to manage computer memory, processes and the operation of all hardware and software.