

The distance between a line and a plane in three-dimensional space can always be calculated using mathematical methods. This distance calculation method is valid for any line and any plane in three-dimensional space, thus making the statement always true.