

The Matterhorn is known for its distinctive pyramid shape with four steep faces rising above the surrounding glaciers and valleys. Each face points towards the compass directions: north, east, south, and west.