

The Dawn Visitor ("At finishing the dawn prayer, he saw him standing alone, wrapped up in a fabric cloak like a cloud, and looking like the shining moon. Surprise overcame fear, perhaps due to his beauty which suggested good. And since the man who had just concluded his prayer was already prepared to receive surprises found it impossible to talk, the coming man encouraged him sweetly and said: – "No doubt you ask who I am." He nodded his head down, felt secure and then the coming man said: "I am a volunteer guest from the Unknown World who has the courage of asking": – "Who sent you, Sir?" "I am a volunteer for I feel your need for help. Aren't I right?" He said in a shivering tone: "I badly need the good". He said efficiently: "I am not the only one in that. No personal complaints; we all feel sad about what is going on around us. And we feel more sad for being unable to change it." – "An old story." "But painful." "Everyone does his lot in terms of his qualifications." – "One block is not enough to straighten a crooked building."