

Protecting uncontacted peoples has grown more challenging in light of these serious dangers. While some nations, like Brazil and India, have outlawed approaching them, groups like Survival International are trying to raise awareness of the challenges they confront.