

It's generally recommended that adults limit their caffeine intake to moderate levels to avoid these potential health consequences.