

Over the past few years cryptocurrencies have become a topic of research and debate (De Vries, 2018). Therefore, projected changes to the global energy sources available for cryptocurrency production and its environmental footprint should be considered in this breakthrough technology value assessment. Cryptocurrency is a relatively new combination of cryptology and currency in finance and is becoming more frequently used worldwide (Li et al., 2018).