

On a beautiful and bright day, we went on a school trip to Muscat Mall on Wednesday with my schoolmates. My friend Hafsa accompanied me. We arrived at the mall and the teacher set a time to meet us at the exit gate. Then we went to buy some snacks, but we faced a problem as we did not find the supermarket. We sat trying to convince her to complete our tour in search of the supermarket, but in vain. In the end, it was frustrating, but it became one of our funniest memories. Then we set off to start our planned activities. First, we started exploring the mall and looking here and there and knowing what we will start with. We went first to the electrical games section. We searched and searched and searched. We sat running in the aisles like crazy because time was about to end. We sat waiting until we get a card to play. We played and played and it seemed that time took us. Then, after we saw that there was little time left, we went to buy a meal. Then our friend came to tell us that time was over and we wanted to go, but when we arrived to the teacher, she told us that we should wait because there were still some students who had not returned. We could not convince The teacher and we sat waiting as if we were being punished. We looked very funny when we left the mall and the students returned and we arrived at the school to go back home. We remembered our looks while we were trying to convince the teacher and we laughed. That trip ended with a funny situation. We laughed. Everything we remembered was that trip.
