

Explain in detail the enzymes involved, the catalyzed reactions, and the improvements in the final product. Enzymes are biocatalysts that play a crucial role in facilitating various biochemical reactions within living organisms. Each enzyme is specialized for a particular substrate and catalyzes a specific reaction, often resulting in the transformation of a substrate into a product with improved efficiency and specificity. Scientific images should be included to help explain the enzyme reaction.