

In simpler terms, customers compare similar options when buying something, and they might remember options they haven't chosen for a long time and include them in their consideration again