

Moisture vapor attempts to move from a warm area to a colder one, where it can more readily condense.