

introduction: Clay in the soil represents an essential element that affects its physical and chemical properties, and thus plays a vital role in supporting the growth of plants and providing them with a suitable environment.[4] 3_ Improving soil aeration : Clay minerals contribute to improved soil structure and functionality by preventing particle aggregation and facilitating better air and water flow. Inheritance from the rock.