

The impact of bypass fat supplementation on the reproductive and production characteristics of high-yielding crossbred cows with or without postpartum hormonal induction of oestrus was assessed by Das et al. (2020). Animals fed bypass fat (GII and GIII) had a higher relative economic benefit than other animals, and the calving to conception interval was significantly shorter.