Obesity is a complex, multifaceted health issue that has reached epidemic proportions globally.Additionally, policies that regulate food marketing, improve access to nutritious foods, and promote physical activity in schools and workplaces can help combat obesity on a population level.