

1.The seller sells a product for which there are no close substitutes; 3.There are barriers to entry that prevent competitors from entering the market; 4.The market consists of a single seller; 2.The seller can control the price of his or her product