

"Less care of children" refers to the reduced ability of working parents to provide direct supervision, attention, and involvement in their children's daily lives due to their job responsibilities. This lack of consistent parental involvement may result in children feeling neglected or not getting the support they need for their growth and development.