

Its origins go back to the Japanese school of metabolism Dynamic architecture is a new architectural engineering based on the dynamics of movement. Dynamic architecture is considered one of the types of green architecture and sustainable architecture because of its self-energy generation.