

The issue of internet addiction among university students has been a subject of recent studies. The Young's internet addiction test (YIAT) is commonly used for measuring levels of internet addiction, categorizing it as normal, mild, moderate, or severe based on scores.