

A mammogram is an X-ray imaging technique used to screen for breast cancer by detecting abnormalities or changes in breast tissue. Mammograms are a key tool in early cancer detection, especially for women aged 40 and older, and can find tumors that are too small to feel.