2.Often violists prefer a softer, stickier rosin and violinists a lighter, harder rosin to compliment their strings – but this is down to personal preference!The gauge of the strings is different, with the violin having a lighter tension and shorter, thinner strings than those of a viola.STRINGS Violins and violas are tuned in fifths, but the viola starts one fifth lower.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com