and the problem of radiation exposure at the wound site during the suture absorption period after surgeries, which requires the development of a functional coating to mitigate this significant clinical challenge.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com