However, as the evidence began to accumulate, experts Trom the Zoo felt obliged to investigate, for the descriptions given by people who chmed to have seen the poma were extraordinarily similar. When reparts aame into Londor Zoo that a wild puma had been spotteed forty-five miles south of s London, they were not taken seriously. The scarch proved difficult, for the puma was often observed at one place in the morning and at another place rwenty miles away in the evening.
