

Translocation of CagA into host gastric epithelial cells by H. pylori is achieved via a specific interaction between surface adhesins of the bacteria and receptors for the bacterial component on the host cells.